Harding and Baseball
Teachers, Go to Italy
The Witch Doctor's Charm
Gas? Yes. Labor? No
By Arthur Brisbane
Copyright, 1921

For one American citizen that carefully read President Harding's message yesterday, a thousand American citizens will carefully read baseball scores and baseball stories this morning. There is something in the suggestion that the people of the United States achieved self-government before they were quite ready for it. However, the people are absolutely ready for professional baseball. Self-government may come next.

Advice to public school teachers:
Spend this summer's vacation in Italy. Visit the most cheerful, hospitable and delightful people on earth. You will feel very rich as you pay $5 per day for your board and room at the hotel—about $1 of our money. And when you come back with increased respect for the great Italian people, tell your class children to tell their parents about it.

Congo survives on the African equator revolted, burned trading posts, killed white men and cattle. A witch doctor had sold them a charm warranted to make them invulnerable and invulnerable to bullets.

White soldiers helped the witch doctor when, to quiet the natives, they fired in the air, not wanting to kill them. Hearing the guns fired and not being hurt the natives concluded that they really were invulnerable and invulnerable. Now many will have to be killed to cure them of witch doctor faith.

With a certain type too much gentleness in the beginning is a mistake. If the first Congo gentleman depending on his charm had been shot dead it would have saved the lives of many others.

We pity or despise the poor natives that believe their witch doctor and carry a little charm in the mouth or tucked in the woolly hair to make them invulnerable and invulnerable. But, millions of Russian soldiers went into battle carrying little "kross" images they thought surely would protect them, that didn't. May here, able to read and think, better off than the Russian peasant, still believe in "luck" and evil omens, unlucky Friday, unlucky "13," etc.

Gas companies are told by a learned judge of the Federal court that they may charge $1.50 per thousand feet for gas after April 15, because "the $1 rate is confiscatory." A thousandth of a dollar will tell you that it is "confiscatory" to make a corporation sell gas for less than it costs to produce it, plus a comfortable profit. No judge in a thousand will tell you that it is confiscatory to take the vitality, time and life of a workman and pay him less than it costs to live, plus a comfortable profit.

Senator Knox's peace move once more.

In a few days, probably, the country will be officially at peace with Germany. The nonsense of keeping up an imaginary war will be ended. Then will come, presumably, a release of political prisoners, and the country will be ready to start up business with all the world—excepting Russia. That also will come in time.

President Harding will not permanently take the ground that the Russian nation has no right to govern themselves except by and with the consent of a handful of Wall Street speculators and foolish bond buyers.

Still danger of the big strike in England, with 4,000,000 walking out. England faces this important question:

Can the labor problem there be solved before labor shall have discovered for itself what it means to go hungry and through violence for a few months, incidentally ruining national industry?

For about the tenth time, in this column, you are warned to be careful how you gamble in "little" steel stocks. The little steel company has cut prices, and that is only a start. Many dollars per cent can be cut from everything, and the big company will still be making money after cutting the price below what it costs little companies to produce.

SHUT OUT WHEN THEY SAW LOWLY NEWSPAPER OF MURDER

Panorama Illustrating Vital Scenes in Preston Murder Mystery

The above panorama strikingly illustrates the isolated, lonely and open nature of the Wakefield country, where Patrolman James Arthur Preston was slain, only a few trees to left and right partially screening the spot on Lowell street where the officer was murdered. The photo was made from the home of Fred M. Libby, one of the State's most important witnesses. Libby was returning to his home the night of the murder when he noticed the closed auto, at shown in the above illustration, standing in Lowell street, with the lights dimmed, one light appearing to be extinguished. He passed the auto and proceeded across the field, shown in the foreground, when he heard a man say: "Come on. Come on." He assumes this was Patrolman Preston speaking to the occupants of the auto. Libby says he then heard a girl scream and the discharge of three or four shots rang out. He turned in his tracks (the running figure on the dotted line depicts Libby and his course) and hurriedly retraced his steps to the road. Reaching the street, Libby says he saw a man and woman run and jump into the standing auto. The car, according to Libby, "started off like H—" in the direction of Saugus. The cross the illustration points out the spot where Libby and a passing autoist found Patrolman Preston's body. The bullet-riddled remains lay by the side of the road and a burning flash light was clutched in the lifeless fingers of the victim. To the left, background, of the illustration is indicated the place on the Saugus line, near Nahant street, where Libby's abandoned machine was found after the murder. Behind one of the trees, shown in the illustration, which guard the road, and a few yards from where Preston's body was found, Mr. and Mrs. Pauley of Lowell street claim they saw a man hiding a few minutes before the murder. The mysterious figure wore a light raincoat and his appearance startled Mrs. Pauley, who urged her husband to speed up the motorcycle which he was driving.

WRIT FOR PONZI DELAYS TRIAL

Brightwell Case Held Up by Discussion of Summons to Plymouth Jail

The trial of Charles M. Brightwell and thirteen other defendants of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company was delayed for a considerable time because of a conference held by Judge Pennington in the lobby relating to a writ of habeas corpus issued by him to Sheriff Earl P. Blake commanding him to bring from the Plymouth County Jail Charles Ponzi for arraignment on indictments pending against him in Suffolk County.

Harvard Myers, one of the defendants, who testified on Tuesday, was examined by Special Assistant William Platero, who is conducting the prosecution.

Myers said that he had not asked any of his friends to invest in notes of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company and added that he had not been in Boston long and had not made friends. He left the work of soliciting money to agents of the company and declared that if he had had any doubt about the legality of the business he would not have gone into it. Investors, he said, had as much security as they would have had in any other business, and he and his associates showed good faith in sending a representative to Europe.

Myers told of unsuccessful efforts to get bank connections in Boston. Myers was requested by Platero to produce their accounts in the Fidelity Trust Company and the National Citizens Bank. Their customers were not informed of this fact.

Myers said that Brightwell had told him of a visit to the office of District Attorney Feltus which resulted in changing the form of notes issued.

CHARGES IN NOTES.
Asked by Mr. Platero as to whether investors were informed as to what the company was doing, Myers replied that he told them "we are going to deal in foreign exchange." He didn't tell them that they were going to raise $250,000 and then stop.

Myers admitted that when asked by Capt. Armstrong as to the difference between the business of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company and that done by Ponzi, he (Myers) had replied "His proposition is a pyramid proposition," the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company is engaged in legitimate business.

Says Bride Stayed Out Nights

Ivy Gibbs, English war bride

Harold W. Gibbs of Brockton, who seeks an absolute divorce from her husband, testified his bride insisted on going out three nights a week and that her desire for feminine finery forced him into debt. She flatly denies all the charges made against her husband.

Brockton, April 14.—That his English war bride insisted on going out three nights a week was declared by Harold W. Gibbs, manager of the American District Telegraph Company here, when he took the stand in the trial of her suit for absolute divorce. Friends of the husband are to testify to her alleged lack of affection for him.

Gibbs contradicted the beautiful bride's charges of penury that forced her to work, asserting that he had spent upon her the $2,000 he had in the bank after discharge from the navy, buying suits that cost $20, dresses from $40 to $100, shoes from $10 to $15 and a fur coat that cost $180. As a result, he said that he ran into debt.

He denied that he had asked her either to exchange in stock marriage before coming to America or to pose in the nude for his art sketches, but admitted having her followed by a private detective, who was not produced as a witness, a fact that Mrs. Gibbs' counsel stressed. He also stated that he had brought her an automobile, took her to the theatre and introduced her to his friends, but that she was dissatisfied with all.

Cross-examined, Mrs. Gibbs denied familiarity with a Major Beard, whom they met coming out on the boat, and said she had never taken off her wedding ring to pose as unmarried. She declared that she had not retained from introducing her husband to her friends because of his lack of good clothes, and that she was not eager "to get something on him." She asserted that it was untrue that she planned to marry a man in New York the day after a divorce might be granted.

An amendment to the Stuart street extension bill, requiring the approval of the City Council of Boston, before it can go into effect, was defeated by the House of Representatives following the declaration by Representative Lomasney of Boston that the members of the City Council "can't even select a presiding officer."
